Introduce the topic What is the topic of your essay? This question comes before the introduction. If the topic is about a book or film, you should write a short summary of what is your topic; if you want to talk about your child or your favourite sport, just write about it. You should be concise. Choose a word that means something different from the meaning of your chosen word. For example, if you pick the word good, you should write a sentence about something evil. If you know the place and time of the word, it is easier to understand how it evolved and how it is used now. Choose a quotation. This will help you to describe how your word was used. In this case, you are choosing a quotation from Shakespeare. Describe how the word is used now. You can describe how it sounds and how it is written. For example, if the word is from Shakespeare, you can write that it is written with capital letters. What is the most important meaning of the word? This is the meaning that you should discuss in this part of your essay. Choose a word that is a synonym for the chosen word, and also is different from the first meaning. Describe how the word is used in the Oxford 3000. Describe the historical origin of the word. This is very important. Don't just explain that the word has appeared recently, but the reason for it appearing. Talk about the changes that have happened in language. Explain what the word meant before it
