Nox Archaist gameplay:

A Metroidvania game coming from the makers of the Humble Indie Bundle. It is set in a medieval fantasy world, a year after the evil wizard Galanic has been defeated when you come across an old man in need of help. Before falling to drink, he reveals the power of the Sorcerers of Living Things. With this power, the wizard has made four pendants, which can only be made and used by a certain group of people - friends. Each pendant contains a different method, or potion, to increase your magespeed. The Sorcerers, dubbed the Companions, are your allies, and will help you travel the world, meet new characters, gain upgrades, and fight monsters.

In Nox Arhcist, you can run, jump, climb, slide, and roll across the land. Using the power of different potions that you gain as you play, you can grab onto ledges and walls, and boost yourself up. These can be especially useful when going through enemies, or simply quick-moving passages. Every character you meet will give you advice or items, as well as allowing you to join their group. These, like your characters, can gain experience and level up. The pendants can be crafted to show off your characters special abilities and stats.

Each platform level has a boss that you must defeat before progressing on to the next.

Our Story
The New Frontier of Gaming
Yesterday, we developed a mod for an 8-bit RPG; today, we enter the world of video games as a full-blown game studio and digital art gallery. Nox Archaist: Ed and Chris, our lead artists, have been working on their first 4-hour game as a partnership since we graduated in June, 2015. We decided to take the leap to prototype and set our own deadline of less than a year. We planned to make a fun indie game in the style of a 8-bit RPG; we wanted to make a game that hearkened back to the days of classic roleplaying games with a modern twist. We wanted to make a game that looked and played like a classic RPG game from 1980. We wanted to make a game that had a surprising depth. But the idea came first. The game was just too much fun to give up on it at the beginning. Nox Archaist: We decided to make a game that was more of a puzzle-solving RPG, giving the player the freedom to play in any way he or she wants. The game is made up of two characters: Isra and Dna. In Isra's opinion, it was her destiny to be a high-class courtesan who collects all of the famous "stars" in the universe. Dna disagrees. He wants to be a great adventurer and win the love of everyone on this planet. Because Isra and Dna disagree, they have been forced to live on opposite ends of a galaxy. We are using a core that is based on the engine for the Yooka-Laylee game. The game will not run on tablets or smartphones; it has been made for a controller. Each night, the player will encounter a group of famous "stars" who are trying to escape from a galaxy. There will be many obstacles in the way of Isra and Dna, and the player will have to solve them. But, there is a big secret: Isra has stolen Dna's "Dna Star", an extremely rare "star" that is the love of everyone on the planet. When the "stars" find out that Isra has this star, they will converge on her so she can collect it. In order to collect the "Dna Star", the player will have to locate the star and

Nox Archaist (real name Natalie Loxton) is a fictional superhero appearing in American comic books published by Marvel Comics. She is the second Archaist, the first member of Fantastic Four appearing in The Amazing Spider-Man, and later appeared in The Amazing Spider-Man and The Spectacular Spider-Man under the alias "Archaist". Publication history Created by Stan Lee and Steve Ditko, illustrated by Steve Ditko, first appeared in Amazing Spider-Man #1 (August 1963). Reprinted in Official Handbook of the Marvel Universe A-Z Volume 1, Fantastic Four #31. Fictional character biography Natalie Veritas doesn't exist before she meets and becomes the archaist, so her true origin has never been explained. She is raised an adult by a female monk named Mara Doran in an order called the Temple of the Chthonians. Veritas is taught to be a fighter, though she finds that her gift, when she first found it, is more suited to diplomacy than to combat. She receives several certificates from the Medal of Honor who still respect her fighting and leadership skills. She also encounters various priests, both male and female, studying in anticipation of an eventual wedding. It is also learned that she possesses the gift of a Chthonian gift called "the Archaist". This unusual, unstable form of telepathy is passed from sibling to sibling, until one of them mysteriously dies without it passing to anyone else. In this respect, it recalls the widow's peak, which was once passed from husband to wife in Ireland, probably because it was an unusual form of inheritance. At her thirtieth birthday, Mara announces to Natalie that she is to marry soon in accordance with the customs of the Chthonians. She then proposes to Natalie and on encouragement from Natalie, Mara reveals that Mara has been in contact with an alternate world in the past and this is why the order has its agenda. Natalie leaves the order and returns to the United States to find a scientific academy where she studies and later opens an agency, called the "Archaist Agency", with many old friends and allies. Most of the men of the world are not welcome in her office, as she believes they're unnecessary. She has an office to herself, kept under guard. Other archaists begin appearing, and at some point she realises that one of them is responsible for the death of the only child the previous
